The Semi-Weekly Succulent

How Hussman MA's Suck It Up

Z ZOOM reserves the right to censor any and all harmful mention of poor social distancing or hoarding. Z

What's New in the Zoo(m)?

Ginny Horne, Resident Worry-Wort, Shares Secrets to Successful Panic Attacks!

Ever wonder what happens if ~~COVID-19~~ strikes again in the fall? Ginny does, and so she has 5 steps to help out.

Heidi Kaminski Calls ~~COVID-19~~ a "Mass of Spaghetti"!

Students experienced hunger and even drooling, though neither feeling alleviated the fear that everyone should take a Leave of Absence until 2023.

Amari Pollard Designs Website of Short Stories!

At The Storybook Corner, Amari and her father post stories and invite submissions (except for that dystopian, cyberpunk, tree-and-boy love story you've been writing since sixth grade).

McGee Bosworth Co-Launches Fluidity Designs!

Our Resident Fashion Insider has developed a website to advocate social distancing through themed clothing. After all, Dr. Fauci reports that wearing hand sanitizer shirts works as well as applying hand sanitizer!

A Fourth Poem

Drenched in marinara, all covered in cheese,
Spaghetti bows lightly, our reprieve from disease.

UNC, so they say, boasts the best pasta cooks,
Repeating it with uncertain, foot-in-mouth looks.

Simply add a fork and twist its tines,
Swallow the mass and consider a sample of wines.

Tuitions, livelihoods, futures, what are these
Before the haven of spaghetti, reprieve from disease?

Our (Semi)-Weekly Walter

In honor of Walter Hussman and his principles, the Semi-Weekly

Succulent has created its own core principles to guide its future content:

HUSSMAN:	SUCCULENT:
Objectivity	Obtuseness
Impartiality	Impossibility
Integrity	Invite-only
Truth-Seeking	True-Satire

We Raise Our Glass, You Bet Your Ass, To:

Valerie Fields's Moral Explorations

All MEJO732 students may miss the differing viewpoints of hypothetical clients, crucial as it was to consider them. However, we can now scrub ourselves free of other opinions and soothe ourselves with NPR, Tik Tok and other balms.

MEJO571's Failed Python-Charming

Regardless of Deen Freelon's deep expertise and sonorous voice, his students report mental constriction, personal humiliation, and revenge fantasies.

Successfully Completing Year One

Alas, we'll never feel the accomplishment. Rushing out to Franklin Street for celebratory drinks would have been better than closing Zoom and reminding ourselves that we're apparently halfway done. Hurrah...?

Master's Thesis Meeting Reminds Students of Master's Thesis

Thanks to the elusive Tom Linden, master's students realized that Spring 2021 will somehow hurt them more than Spring 2020 did. "I'm already procrastinating," one student said while staring blankly at the Thesis Handbook.

Chancellor Gust-Me-Quick

Continues to Nod With Pursed Lips

The Chancellor, who meets with health officials every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, finds graduate students' petition "reasonable." Also, wait until June to know whether our classes will remain online in Fall 2020!

Fact Time? Fact Time.

Succulents are resistant to pests, and they don't become sunburned.

Personally, I count succulents as the inspiration for my Summer 2020 plans. No Pests, No Cancer!

Kevin LaTorre needs ... creative design help for a summer project?

Because he clearly believes that straight lines and combinations of white, gray, and blue are the extent of visual appeal, Kevin solicits help for a personal project which needs a shot at beauty.

Save him from himself through email.

Are you doing something that'll turn our cohort as green as cacti?

Let me know (at kevinlаторre@me.com) and I'll spread the word!
